ORDER

In Laincy v. Chatham County, Ga., 2010 WL 4553447 (S.D. Ga. Nov. 3, 2010), doc. 57, the Court chastised employment-discrimination plaintiff Alix Laincy for throwing everything and the kitchen sink at his ex-employer, Chatham County, Georgia:

Title VII affords employees broad protection in the workplace. Modern litigation must operate on the basis of a complaint that clearly and sufficiently states claims for relief and the basis therefor[]. Yet, Plaintiff should be advised against a “kitchen sink” style of employment litigation. Simply asserting a multitude of claims falling within this Court’s jurisdiction without properly asserting facts is not a best practice.

Id. at * 1.

Finding it impossible to resolve the then-pending summary judgment motion that the County had filed, the Court directed Laincy to file a Second Amended Complaint, then prescribed litigation steps for both parties to take -- when to file motions, cite to the record, and so forth. Id. Meanwhile, the Court had granted the County leave to file a brief in excess of L.R. 7.1(a)'s 25-page limit. Doc. 36. When the County again moved for summary judgment, it filed a 43-page long supporting brief. Doc. 60-13.

Moving to dismiss that for violating Rule 7.1(a), Laincy says that the County should have first re-requested permission. Doc. 62. The County says it thought the prior consent continued through the Court's "re-do" directive. Doc. 64. The Court finds Laincy's beef much ado about nothing. His dismissal motion, doc. 62, is therefore DENIED.

In the meantime, Laincy moves for an extension of time within which to respond to the County's summary judgment motion. Doc. 67. He would like his L.R. 56.1, 21-day response deadline to commence "after the Court enters an order on Plaintiff's Motion to dismiss." Id. at 1. This motion (doc. 67) is GRANTED IN PART. Laincy must respond to the County's motion within 21 days after the date this Order is served.

SO ORDERED this 16th day of March, 2011.
